Research in Progress:

The Human Mosaic: Cultural Beliefs and Health Professions Training (PI Rosich)

Description: Based on training materials developed by the Alaska Geriatric Education Center on indigenous populations within Alaska-USA, the project addresses the challenge of developing culturally sensitive training materials for health care professionals by providing a tool that examines and charts historical events (i.e., cohort analysis) that have influenced Alaska's Native health care belief system.
This project broadens the previous SGENC Visiting Scholar Project by extended it to include a comparative analysis of historical events in Oceanic (i.e., Australia and New Zealand) areas and the differential impact on indigenous individuals residing in those areas and the effectiveness of utilizing in training of health care professionals in those areas.
